Your Design office is staffed by brilliant people.
Still it takes a lot of time to get design information out to manufacturing or to a customer. Why?

Design Offices work with optimal efficiency when...

- Designers get information they need, in the nick of time.
- Designers are sure that the drawings and documents sent out are indeed the latest.
- All departments are able to collaboratively work on the same product.
- Inter-departmental checks, validations and approvals happen in automated life-cycles.

... in short, when they are automated

PLM Solutions can automate your design office. It is important for organizations to have a clear PLM strategy

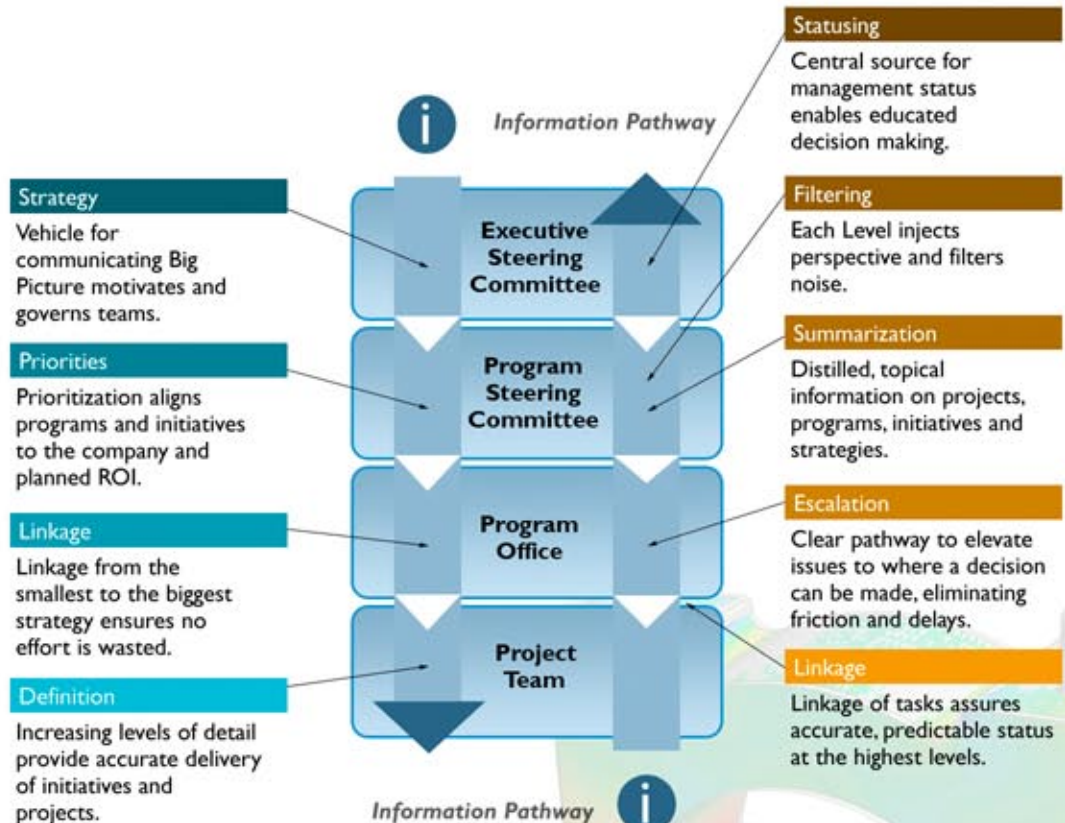

Your Design office has been computerised and connected with a secure computer network.

Well that is only the first step.

➤ A PLM strategy roadmap for design office automation

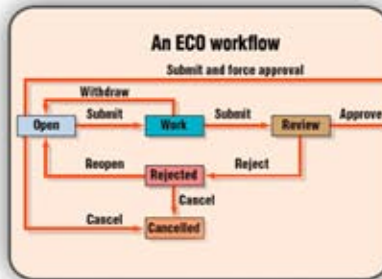

➤ Organizations wishing to implement a PLM strategy must get a proven model for PLM implementation....

The Conceptia proven model to Design Office Automation

A team of experts from Conceptia shall work with you to understand, capture and document the product structure and processes in your design office. As a result of this understanding we shall recommend an apt PLM software system for implementation at your site.

Processes in your design office will be automated so that documents reach the desktop of only intended users electronically for action. On completion of his job the user can dispatch it to the next user in the life-cycle. Top management can be alerted for unactioned files.

Conceptia shall help you to put in place administrative procedures, for users to commence using the PLM system. Conceptia shall train your team members to use the PLM system. A PLM champion shall be identified and trained as the PLM administrator for your company.
